JETSAM & FLOTSAM

Casket Works #24

www.reapermini.com

Here I am, finally in the limelight and getting to write the Jetsam & Flotsam opening editorial for a Casket Works. Is it really that big of a deal? Not really, but over the last decade it has become a quest for me to complete and even managed to get on my top-ten list of things to do before I die.

Time and time again I would ask Ron, "Please, can I write a Jetsam & Flotsam?" to which he always replied... "You, sir, are not worthy of the honor as you have chosen English as your sacrificial language. Further, I will not subject our fans to your nonsensical babble, filibustering and all-around boring writing."

I know what you are thinking here, no way, Ron would never say that! But sadly, those very words passed his lips not once, but several times!

So why is he letting me finally write my own Jetsam & Flotsam after all these years? Why is he finally letting me cross number 8 off that list and bask in the warm glow that is the Jetsam & Flotsam? Simple really, I have bad news to convey and like the character holding the ticking bomb in the cartoons, he handed me the task and disappeared so fast he only left a puff of smoke where he once stood.

At least that's my story and I'm sticking to it. Anyway, the other story where I martyred myself and selflessly took on the task to save Ron from the burden was not really coming together the way I wanted it to. I felt it made me sound all full of myself.

Bad news? Yes you did see that phrase in the prior paragraph. In a nutshell we have had to raise the price on almost all models. Call it what you like, price adjustment, price hike or just plain ugly, it was something we held off from doing as long as we could. On a small, but brighter note, a large group of models had no price increase and a few even saw their retail price decrease.

Long story short here, Tin is at a record high and hovering around $20,000 per ton on the world markets. This price is aggravated even more with the falling US Dollar, as almost all Tin is imported. When you add to this a serious increase in our freight and supply costs from fuel surcharges you have one big squeeze.

All of us here at Reaper hope that this price increase does not put a huge burden on your entertainment dollar and hope you still continue to enjoy your hobby. We thank you for your support.

...and who knows, maybe someday I will get to write a real Jetsam & Flotsam with spotlights, synchronized swimming and cannons that shoot hot wings!

Demonic forces are re-animating the corpses of your enemies! Are you ready to take on the Kroids?

Somewhere in 1940's Europe, Demonic forces have awakened. Attracted by the violence of World War II, These forces have begun to animate the dead - but not every zombie is a mindless beast. Some have a demonic intelligence controlling them - these are the Kroids! Utilizing Reaper's RAGE game system, Reich of the Dead pits heroic American GI's battling the reanimated mindless zombies of the Third Reich, as well as the more sinister Undead Nazi Kroids and their warmachines! The game system is under development now, but expect to see models and updates on ReaperMini.com!!
